Questions:

With justification that a detainee is possibly armed and dangerous, are items of contraband discovered by "plain feel" through the clothing, subject to seizure?

Answer:

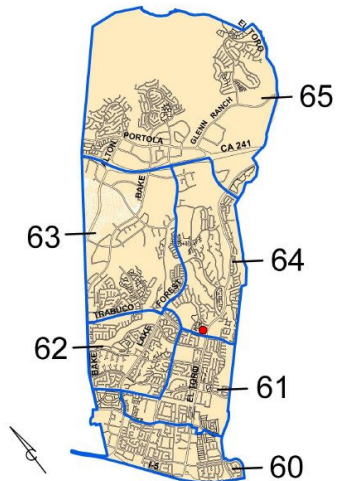

YES. As long as no manipulation or removal is conducted during the discovery.—Minnesota v. Dickerson (1993) 508 US 366, 375-76. To reinforce "plain feel" seizures, ask the searched suspect to identify what your suspicious of. "Feeling and manipulating the contents of a soft container through the outside is a search, which must be based on a warrant or some exception."—Bond v. US (2000) 529 US 334.

DID YOU KNOW...

Juvenile Citations

From police trivia originally published on Friday, March 27th, 2015.

When citing a juvenile, the back for the cite needs to be completely filled out in order for investigations to follow up with the juvenile or PRYDE'S/Probation's ability to process the cases.

After you finish the misdemeanor section, make sure to fill out: the father's & mother's full address, home phone & business phone number's.

Note: you must write a continuation because handwritten narratives are no longer accepted.
